

How to choose a great Alaska wedding site!

Courtesy of Wedding Guide of Alaska

From casual beachy weddings to formal weddings there is a lot to plan for and consider in making your choice for a wedding and reception location.

Here are some helpful tips:

The first thing that will determine the location is the number of guests you are inviting. A very small wedding party can happen anywhere. The larger the wedding party the fewer locations will work, however you still have a lot of choices from formal to beachy casual.	Wedding vendors to consider Superstar Pastry Design Aurora LimousinesVoted ACVB business of the month! Hilton Anchorage © Copyright 2004-2007 Wedding Guide of Alaska
If you plan your wedding day for a Saturday, you need to plan way ahead as that is the most popular day and hardest to reserve. Sites for days other than Saturday may be more available.
You should plan your location on sentiment and on convenience for family travel.
If you have a large wedding, are there enough accommodations in the area for out-of-town guests?
Is the site big enough for what your are planning, not just for the crowd, but other facilities too. You don't want people spread out in separate little spaces either. Like all the men being in the bar with the sports channel on while the women are out by the dance floor.
If an outdoor wedding is in your plans, make a plan B for incremental weather.

Consider where everyone will park. You may need to hire a shuttle.

If you would like to have your reception in an unusual place, keep in mind that the more creative the space, the more details you will have to work out yourself. More traditional and established reception facilities have more services that can be taken care of by others.

If you wish to marry and have the reception in a private home or location budget and plan carefully because you will have to rent stuff; ie, tables, chairs etc. Plan for bathroom facilities. Can the home accommodate all those guests?

Check to see if you need permits and fire department inspections for tents. Some municipalities require these before the event.
Make sure you have enough electricity to accommodation lighting a tent, plugging in the live band or music, running the coffee pot.

If this wedding is at a home, make sure there is parking. Find out if you need permits from the city or county, inform your neighbors.

Storage may be important in a private home. If need be, where is the table, chairs and tent going to be stored.

Wedding vendors to consider

Flowers Cakes
Jewelry Food

COSTCO
Anchorage

Anderson's Bride

Horse-Drawn Carriage
Company LLC.

Hawaiian Vacations
(907) 261-2700